DISCOVERING ISRAEL

Ruthie Cohen smiled as she watched the four young people sitting around her small kitchen table enjoying a home-cooked meal of fish and vegetables. It could be any dinner table in any house in Israel, but it wasn't. The unusual thing about it was that Ruthie had met her dinner guests for the first time just 10 minutes earlier. They were hikers who were walking along the Israel Trail. Ruthie and her husband Han are "trail angels" – Israelis who open their homes to hikers on the trail.

The 1000-km Israel Trail goes from Eilat in the south to Metulla in the north. The hardest part of the trail is from Eilat to Arad because it crosses the desert. Since the trail opened in 1995, tens of thousands of people have hiked at least part of it. According to a recent survey, about four out of 10 hikers complete the whole trail. It usually takes about two months to do so.

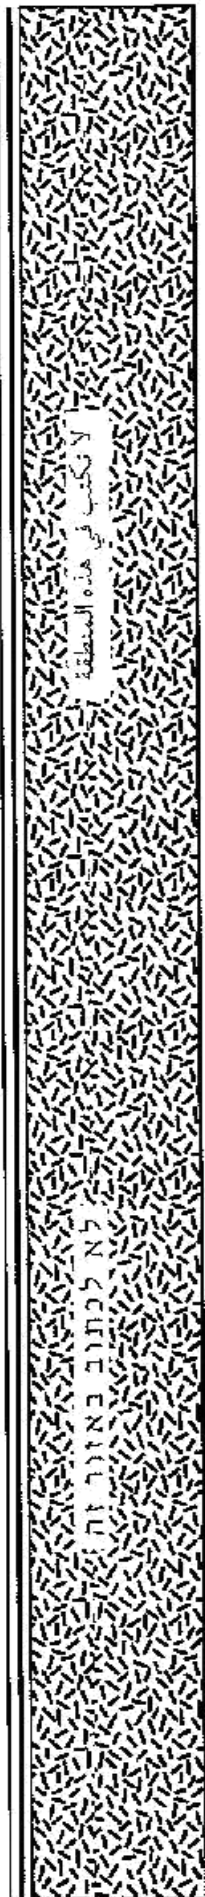

In the past, hikers usually slept outside. But now, many of them are happy to benefit from the hospitality of trail angels. There are hundreds of these angels who provide different services for free. Some offer just their backyard where hikers can put up a tent, but most offer a clean bed, hot showers and the use of the kitchen.

25 A few, like Ruthie and Ilan, also serve home-cooked meals. Over the past four years they have hosted a large number of hikers and their experience has been generally positive. "Most of them are lovely young people, and it's a real pleasure to meet them," Ruthie says.

30 The hikers are grateful for the meal and a comfortable place to sleep. "At first we planned to sleep in a youth hostel but it was full," says Ben, 23. "So we called Ruthie and Ilan to see if they had a place for us. Staying with trail angels really adds to our experience. They make us believe in the good in people."

35 Ben and his three friends have been hiking together for a month, and plan to be on the trail for another five weeks. "Hiking is a wonderful way to see the country," says Ben. "Although our country is small, there's still so much to discover and so many wonderful people to meet."
